

Technical Outlook: Nifty

On the 15th of Sept, the Benchmark index finally witnessed a breakout on the higher side of a narrow range consolidation pattern and registered its new lifetime high of 17532.70. Nifty50 was trading in a band of almost 200 points from the last six trading sessions without giving any meaningful indication.

Prices have given a smaller degree horizontal trend line breakout on the daily chart and the earlier resistance of 17300 will act as the next immediate support for the prices as per the change of polarity concept.

From the last three trading sessions, we have seen a consistency in the advance-decline ratio 2:1 where advancing stocks were having the upper hand even in the sideways trend; it clearly indicates the accumulation phase for the majority of the stocks. Even FII data of 13 & 14th Sept have hinted a strong accumulation in the front line stocks as we have seen almost Rs.2000 cr buying.

Momentum oscillator RSI (14) is continuously sustaining above 70 levels and currently hovering between 75 – 80 levels on the daily interval. An indicator or oscillator can remain in the overbought zone for a longer duration in the bull market and any dip of an RSI near its previous low can be utilized for a buy-on dips strategy.

The support for the Nifty is placed near the low of the consolidation zone which is placed at 17250 levels and the immediate resistance for the prices is likely to cap near 17800 levels.
