

KEY HEADLINES:

The Indian rupee closed flat to the U.S. dollar on Thursday, recover from earlier weakness as fall in Crude oil and dollar index retreat from high makes gain in Indian currency. Earlier in the session, the rupee had managed to reach 82.53, getting a temporary boost from dollar sales by state-run banks, likely for the RBI, and by foreign banks.

At NSE Future exchange, rupee closed at 82.42 per U.S. dollar, barely changed from 82.43 on Wednesday, making it the third session in a row that the local unit has stayed afloat as the RBI's intervention helped cool intraday volatility.

Rupee forward premiums have dropped, due to the RBI's interventions. The 1-year USD/INR implied yield fell to 2.76%, the lowest in almost two weeks.

The dollar fell against most currencies in volatile trading on Thursday, after initially spiking following a hotter-than-expected U.S. inflation report, as some investors thought the market's initial response to the data was excessive. The greenback briefly hit a 32-year peak against the yen of 147.665 after the data, and was last up 0.1% at 147.09 yen.

Europe's single currency may have rallied from lows after a Reuters report, citing four sources, said European Central Bank staff see the need for fewer rate hikes than markets now estimate to tame inflation. That suggested that the situation in the euro zone may not be as dire as many thought.

Data showed U.S consumer prices increased more than expected in September and underlying inflation pressures continued to escalate, cementing expectations that the Fed will deliver another 75-basis-point (bps) rate increase.

The base case right now is that the Fed will opt for a 75 basis points hike next month and follow it up with a 50-bps increase in December.
