

KEY HEADLINES:

- Euro zone private sector activity slowed in September, according to survey data released on Friday. The composite output index, which measures the combined output of both the manufacturing and service sectors fell to 54.2 from 54.5, against expectations for 54.4.
- The dollar weakened against most of its rivals on Friday, barring the British currency, as stronger equity markets and rising bond yields fuelled a rush to buy riskier assets.
- German private sector growth slowed slightly more than expected in September, with a surprise surge in services activity not enough to offset a sharp slowdown in manufacturing, a survey showed on Friday.
