NIFTY MONTHLY CHART

Nifty in the previous month touched its all time high levels of 18604 and saw a sharp fall in the last week owing to profit booking and continuous selling by FII. This type of market behavior is not new and we have seen this is in past too where markets become overbought, they tend to move back to its mean.

On Monthly closing basis, Nifty has formed a shooting star candlestick pattern. A shooting star occurs after an advance and indicates the price could start falling. Traders typically wait to see what the next candle does following a shooting star. If the price declines during the next period they may sell & if the price rises after a shooting star, the formation may have been a false signal or the candle is marking a potential resistance area around the price range of the candle.

Immediate supports are placed at 17540-17640 levels & resistance area is near 17950-18050. If index manages to cross 18050, we may see northward journey till 18200 levels and on the downside, if it breaches 17540 then we can see 17200 levels soon. Index is trading well above all moving averages but price has breached the lower band of the channel which is a sign of concern moving ahead.

This has been the Sixth month in a row where nifty has clocked gains. On the indicator front, RSI is at 80 levels which mean that there is still room for correction and traders/investors must not consider going aggressively long. MACD is still showing no signs of weakness whereas ADX is still trending upwards which indicates that the strength of the trend is still intact. So overall indicators are giving mixed signals but price action is king.
